LIBRARY NOTES

Have you made up your mind about voting for President? Do you know what others think about your choice? What do foreign countries think? The answers can be found in the magazine Atlas for October 1968. Atlas is a magazine whose modest "Purpose is to hold the world up to our readers - (to) reflect what the rest of the world thinks of us."

In regard to the U.S. elections Atlas quotes from LeMonde, the Economist, and Corriere della Sera as well as many others in Europe and Asia. If you desire more information about the candidates you can read the following: America, Christain Century, Commentary, New Republic, Time, Newsweek, U.S. News and World Report. All of these are available at the Agawam Center Library.

Miss Richard announces that for the past three weeks Mrs. Barbara Pfannkuche has volunteered to work at the Agawam Center Library three mornings a week, Thank you so much, Mrs. Pfannkuche. We will need your services always.

Another item is that Judy Kana was at the Youtharama Building at Eastern States Exposition, September 14, to show the Girl Scouts how to mend book spines repair torn pages, clean books and replace book pockets.

Last but not least. The Agawam Junior Women's Club has put boxes in the library so that patrons may deposit old books which they do not want. These books will then be sold to book buyers, and the money will be used for library purposes in Agawam. Thank you Junior Women.

TODAY'S AGRI-FACT: Rose Attar, a Fragrant oil distilled from rose petals, was valued at five times its weight in gold shortly after its discovery. Five thousand parts in weight of rose petals produce one part of attar.

Florence Moreno

The following 2 letters came to me last week, and I hereby print them with great joy.

Massachusetts Attention: Mrs. Moreno

Dear Mrs. Moreno:

I read with interest your recent article in the Agawam News concerning the killing of birds by spraying of

I wrote to governor Volpe about your article. He referred my letter to the Department of Natural Re-

I enclose herewith a photostatic copy of the reply I received from Robert L. Yasi, Commissioner, dated August 29, 1968.

Thank you for your article.

Very Sincerely yours, Herbert Murphy Associates

August 29, 1968 Herbert Murphy Associates 115 State Street Springfield, Mass. 01003

Dear Mr. Murphy: Governor Volpe has asked me to reply to your letter to him relative to the news item in the Agawam News about robins and other birds being killed by poisonous tree sprays.

We are as concerned as you are in sparing the lives of the birds in our state, and the Massachusetts Pesticide Board, of which this Department is a member, has banned the use of DDT for dormant spraying of elm trees. It has been satisfactorily shown that the dormant spray, requiring 3 to 5 pounds of DDT per tree, adversely affects birds. Sincerely,

Robert L. Yasi Commissioner

Commonwealth of Massachusetts Department of Natural Resources

I am grateful to Mr. Murphy for sending me these letters, and Mr. Yasi called me from Boston to confirm the release.

It is too late to undo the destruction caused, and there will be little gain if any, unless the Town of Agawam also stops its aerial spraying, and unless the Mass. Public Works Dept. also stops its follow up spraying past the dormant

Birds are the most effective insecticides known. There is no logic in it, if we stop poisoning the birds, and continue to destroy their food supply. There are other ways to get rid of pests in the garden, some of them surprisingly simple. In the following weeks, I'll elaborate on these constructive methods.

While we point an accusing finger against local and state government, let's not forget those among us who spray chlordane over their gardens and trees. Chlordane belongs to the family of chlorinated hydrocarbons, it is cumulative and its kill power is undiminished with time. Chlordane has been found in soils analyzed 15 years after application. Although it has a total kill, flies and mosquitos develop a resistant strain.

Dr. Malcolm Hargraves, hematology dept. Mayo Clinic: " - the vast majority of patients suffering from the blood dyscrasias and lymphoid diseases have a significant history of exposure to the various hydrocarbons which in turn includes most of the pesticides of today. A careful medical history will almost invariably establish such a relationship". If we don't care about birds or bees or pets, what about the children who inhale the residual fumes of chlordane for days afterward. The tell-tale odor lingers on and on.

Vietnam War Produces More Amputees than Korea or WW II

When double leg amputee Ewing W. Mays visits a military hospital to give inspiration-by-example to our wounded Vietnam vets he first talks to ward nurses to single out the most

PHILADELPHIA -- Ewing W. Mays, a man who spends his life proving to amputees that losing a limb isn't the end of the world, says he has found that the Vietnam conflict is turning out a record number of amputees.

Mays, of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., who lost both of his legs in World War II, and toured Korea during the war there, said, "We are fighting a different kind of a war. The Viet Cong seem to use more booby traps, land mines and grenades.

"On a day to day basis, our military hospitals are receiving more GI's with permanent handicaps than ever before."

Mays, who tours hospitals the year around, began his fall hospitals circuit at the U.S. Naval Hospital in Philadelphia. He will later re-rour Walter Reed Army Hospital in Washington, and hospitals in New York.

This hospital is the major clearing center for the Navy and Marine Corps. When he arrived here last wek Mays found over 200 arm and leg amputees under care and more arriving every day.

A visit by Mays is much sought

He whips off his artificial limbs for the boys to examine, answers their many eager questions.

Mays has always been concerned with the psychological recovery of amputees, but does not consider their rehabilitation complete until they have returned to society and are leading lives at least as productive as they would have achieved had they not been injured.

"I believe that the Government should take a new look at its rehabilitation programs for this increased flow of handicapped men, particularly with regard to educational benefits, and the labor market, and as always, I urge hometown business and industry to make room for these heroes as they return home.

The response to our weekly column has been overwhelming. In fact the volume of consumer complaints is up by 50% since the first column appeared in the beginning of August.

Many of the letters we receive do not require action by the Consumer Protection Division, but rather explanations of laws or advice on how to proceed. For example, here is a question typical of those we answered in the last week.

QUESTION. A woman from the Lowell area wrote: "I bought a living room set from a furniture company for $250. Within two weeks the wood had split in many places and when I tried to make the company take the furniture back or fix it, they refused to do anything."

She went on to say, "On top of everything else, I never got a copy of the contract, so you can imagine my chock when I received a payment book from a finance company with $75 interest charge over two years! They never told me they would sell my contract to a loan company or how much it would cost me. Please tell me what I can do now."

ANSWER. First of all, it is not illegal for the furniture company to sell your contract to a finance company. This is a common business practice and you should expect it to occur whenever you enter into a time payment contract.

However, the failure to deliver a copy of the contract to you is quite different. You are entitled by law to a copy of any contract you sign and until you receive a copy, you have the right to CANCEL the contract provided you notify the seller in writing, by CERTIFIED MAIL, RETURN RECEIPT REQUESTED. Upon such notice the seller must return your down payment within 10 days. He, in turn, is entitled to the return of the goods.

There is also a finance overcharge of $25. Since the maximum interest rate is $10 per $100 per year and a criminal penalty is involved, we would appreciate further infor-

QUESTION. A man from Chicopee asked, "Is the company I'm planning on doing business with ANSWER. As a rule we do not rate companies as reputable or otherwise, but only state whether or not we have taken court action against them. Your local Better Business Bureau or Chamber of Commerce may be able to give you more detailed information about the company.

QUESTION. "Is there anything I can do to prevent materials which I consider to be obscene from being sent to me through the mails?"

ANSWER. Receiving such materials can be very unpleasant for the parties involved. Very soon, an entire column will be devoted to what to do when you receive such that skip across a paved road in the beam of an automobile headlight may not be fallen leaves but frogs.

Perhaps you have noticed these objects which many motorists mistake for wind-blown fallen leaves. They are commonest in late September when the nights often are foggy or washed by light rain. They are most noticable on asphalt roads. Since we seldom think of frogs and toads, which are dry-skinned land frogs, as being common on roads, most persons who notice them at all suppose they are leaves.

At this season when frost might arrive at any time, frogs devote much effort to collecting enough food to fatten themselves for winter hibernation. Perhaps we should say more accurately that frogs become excessively hungry, for it is doubtful that they consciously prepare for barren days.

Since they are cold-blooded animals unable to maintain a stable temperature as a man or dog can, they depend upon external heat to keep them warm enough to function efficiently. On a cool autumn evening, a black asphalt road that has absorbed heat from the sun all day, radiates some of its stored warmth after dark. Moist, warm asphalt serves as a comfortable carpet for a frog to squat upon while awaiting passing insects. Insects, too, need warmth and the warm road may attract them, thus doubling its service to frogs.

The frogs most likely to be on a New England road are wood frogs, green frogs, leopard frogs and American toads. In parts of southern New England, the Fowler's toad also may be found on the road. An occasional pickerel frog may join the surface banquet and a bullfrog might be found there, too, but they are not common on roads.

One sees many small frogs on the road, small enough to be spring peepers or gray tree frogs, but none belong to these two species of tree living frogs. The small frogs almost invariably prove to be immature members of the species commonly seen on roads at night.

Anyone familiar with frogs will

by Wayne Hanley Mass. Audubon Society

not be surprised by the presence of wood frogs, leopard frogs and toads, for all of them spend much of their lives away from water. The wood frog, in fact, lives an almost toad-like existence. They are the copperycolored frogs that wear black masks over their eyes. An inexperienced person might mistake them for toads, except for the fact that they can leap long distances like other frogs. Toads can only hop.

The surprising frog on the road is the green frog which normally is an aquatic frog, living much like the bullfrog which it resembles. Dr. James D. Lazell, Jr., Massachusetts Audubon herpetologist, says that he often has found green frogs as far as a halp mile from water. There is at least one record of a green frog burying itself under leaf litter on a forest floor to hibernate for the winter. The fattened frogs soon will go into hibernation. Green frogs, bullfrogs, leopard frogs and pickerel frogs usually hibernate on the bottom of a lake or stream. The wood frog, like the toads, usually goes underground. well away from water. Toads burrow into the earth, and particularly like the warmer earth around foundations
